SATURDAY 27th JUNE 2009

10.00am – 2.00pm

SEMINAR: Working with Caribbean Families: Fathers and Sons

Keynote Speaker: Lennox Thomas worked as a Clinical Social Worker with children and parents in hospitals, children’s homes and the probation service before training in child and family psychotherapy and psychoanalytic psychotherapy. He is a former Clinical Director of Nafsiyat Intercultural Therapy Centre and is now in private practice with families, couples and individuals. He is an Organisational Consultant and a founder member of the Refugee Therapy Centre.

Aim of the Seminar:

This seminar will set out the social and historical context of the Caribbean family and focus on the relationship between fathers and sons. Given the deafening silence in response to the difficulties that black boys of African heritage experience in our society, I would like to consider the various ways in which families with black and or mixed heritage sons can be supported and offered appropriate help.
